During the next three weeks, four "jeunesse" (youth) teams of 10 to 15 year olds participants will meet four "sagesse" (wisdom) teams, whose participants are at least 80 years old. The players will have to answer questions prepared in advance by the artist on four different themes. The discussions will become a source of inspiration for Mario Cyr, who will create four paintings live at the library.

The City of Moncton's 2007 National Public Works celebration was named one of the best in Canada.

According to Canadian Public Works Association President Ian Vaughan, The City's Public Works department provided citizens with an insider's perspective into how public works operations and employees impact their well-being, health and safety. Moncton hosted tours, participated in radio talk shows, placed displays throughout the community, provided school tours and equipment demonstrations, hosted a food drive and held employee recognition events.
